20. Why are the Delta babies being conditioned to hate books and flowers? * 1 point

Mark only one oval.

- A. The Deltas do not need books to perform their social function; they might attempt to think for themselves if allowed to see unfamiliar ideas. The conditioning against nature is for economic reasons. Enjoying nature is free and doesn't keep any factories busy.
- B. It is for economic and environmental reasons. There are not enough trees to use for paper, so additional books cannot be printed. Also, all of the land is needed for growing crops and building houses, so there is no room for flowers. People still try to read and grow flowers, so the government has begun a program to make them both unpopular.
- C. It is for their health to reduce allergies. The human race has become extremely susceptible to dust, mold, and pollen allergies.
- D. It is for religious reasons. Reading and enjoying nature are thought of as sinful because they bring too much pleasure.
