SHAKESPEARE AND HIS TIMES

William Shakespeare was born in the town of Stratford-Upon-Avon in England in 1564. Queen Elizabeth I was the ruling monarch when Shakespeare came to live in London to develop his skills as a poet, playwright, actor, and theater director. In London, Shakespeare joined the Lord Chamberlain's Men, a theater company that allowed him to concentrate on his career as a writer and actor. Once King James I succeeded Queen Elizabeth in 1603, the company was renamed The King's Men. Shakespeare's company frequently performed at Court as well as in other theaters around the city. In 1616, Shakespeare died in Stratford-Upon-Avon, having become one of the most popular and renowned playwrights in English history.

The Elizabethan Age was a time of great prosperity and wealth in England. Furthermore, it was an era that was marked by significant scientific discoveries, explorations, and inventions. Scientists like Copernicus (1473 – 1543), for example, revolutionized Western thought by demonstrating, for the first time, that the planets revolve around the sun rather than the earth. Although many people at first hesitated to accept such startling new ideas, Shakespeare's time, a period also known as the English Renaissance (1500 – 1650), saw a decreased interest in the outdated ideas inherited from the Middle Ages and a growing fascination with new ideas that emphasized the importance and potential of each individual human being.

People like Martin Luther, Leonardo Da Vinci, and John Milton initiated significant changes in religious beliefs, politics, and the arts and stood as examples of the "Renaissance Man" who accumulates skills in a vast variety of subject matters and areas of study while actively participating in public life.

Several of the groundbreaking ideas that characterized the English Renaissance find their way into Shakespeare's King Lear, including:

- This was a new age, a time that required a shift in power from old to new, from old to young. This idea is evidently vital to the story of King Lear and centers on Lear's abdication of power and his struggle to find a place as an aging man in a changing world.

Questions for Essay and Discussion

1. Identify parallels between the Gloucester subplot and the Lear plot by citing specific passages in the text. In which instance do the two plotlines diverge and why?
2. Complete a detailed character analysis for each of the following characters. Indicate their actions as well as their motives. Try to indicate who and what affects their attitudes and actions.
 - King Lear
 - Goneril
 - Regan
 - Cordelia
 - Gloucester
 - Edgar
 - Edmund
 - Oswald
 - Albany
 - Cornwall
 - King of France
3. Evaluate the following statement from Lear by referring to incidents and passages in the text: “I am a man / more sinn’d against than sinning.” (Act III, Scene II)
4. Point out how and to what extent Lear is an example of the classical tragic hero and develop an argument around the possibility of Lear’s error in judgment.
5. Trace occurrences of the “Natural Order” theme and explain how it reflects the changing spirit of Renaissance England.
6. Explain and analyze the function of the Fool. Identify passages that reveal the Fool’s attitude toward Lear’s actions.
7. Trace Lear’s developing madness through the text and identify causes, symptoms, and consequences of his growing mental instability.
8. Identify how the theme of “nothing” correlates with notions of property, value, and family relations.
9. How does Shakespeare’s play comment on family relationships, loyalty, and the status of women? Find specific instances in which the text reveals the attitudes of the author or of individual characters in the play.

King Lear

Act I, Scene I

1. What is the question Lear asks his daughters before he makes the division of his kingdom final? What does he expect of his daughters?

2. What is Cordelia's answer to Lear's question, and why is Lear outraged by Cordelia's answer?

3. How does Kent's reaction to Lear's banishment of Cordelia introduce the theme of sight and insight?

4. In this first scene of the play, how does Shakespeare establish the parallels between the stories of Lear and his daughters on the one hand and the story of Gloucester and his sons on the other hand?

Act II, Scene I

1. What rumor of political upheaval reaches the castle of Gloucester?

2. Why does Edmund injure himself to draw blood?

3. How does Gloucester react when he learns about Edgar's alleged intentions to attack and murder him?

4. How does the conversation between Gloucester and Edmund, following Edgar's escape, signal a reversal of the relationships that Edgar and Edmund have with their father?

5. How does Gloucester's expression "my old heart is crack'd, is crack'd" illustrate the parallel between Gloucester and Lear when it comes to old age and their relationships with their children?

Act III, Scene I

1. What news about Albany, Cornwall, and the King of France does Kent reveal to the Gentleman?

2. What mission does Kent ask the Gentleman to complete?

Act IV, Scene I

1. What does Edgar mean when he says “the worst is not so long as we can say ‘this is the worst’”?

2. How does the following statement by Gloucester contribute to the theme of sight and insight: “I have no way and therefore want no eyes; I stumbled when I saw”?

3. To what degree does Gloucester attribute influence and power to fate and the gods? Where in this scene does his belief become obvious?

4. What can be inferred from Gloucester’s last comments about his attitude toward fate?

5. What climactic moment might Gloucester’s lament about the capriciousness of the gods signify?

Act V, Scene I

1. What great fear does Regan express to Edmund at the opening of the scene? What does she demand of Edmund?

2. What shocking information does Goneril reveal to the audience in an aside and what does this information disclose about her character?

3. Edmund asks an officer to determine whether the Duke of Albany is still on their side since “he’s full of alteration and self-reproving.” Why does Albany stay on the side of Edmund, Regan, and Goneril even though he despises their actions?

4. Why does Edgar, still in disguise, wish to speak to Albany?

5. What is Edmund’s attitude toward the sisters Regan and Goneril, and what does his speech at the end of the scene reveal about his character?
